

By engaging Good Shepherd's consultancy services, you support positive systems change for women, girls and families.

What we offer

We support organisations to increase their capability to deliver better wellbeing outcomes and systems change.

Our specialist consultancy services include:

- Bespoke professional development training in financial hardship, family violence awareness, employee financial wellbeing, supporting complex clients and intersectionality, and identifying the signs of economic abuse.
- Co-design expertise and advice to support you in including your employees or customers in the development of your services and policies.
- Program and policy design tailored to deliver inclusive services and organisational practices.
- Participatory research methodologies to unearth customer narratives, deliver genuine insights for your business practices, and ultimately ensure impact is created.
- Strategic research and evaluation.

Our team & approach

Grounded in experience, developed with expertise.

We are a specialist team with extensive experience in corporate training, human-centred design, qualitative and quantitative research, and evaluation.

Our consultancy programs and methods are founded in our own practitioner-based experience – then designed and delivered by our in-house team of experts from academia, policy, community development and planning backgrounds.

Better outcomes for clients, staff and the community.

Talk to us about your needs and then let us apply our understanding and insight to provide best-practice deliverables and develop positive change for your organisation and your employees or clients.

Why use our services?

After more than 150 years of providing support and tackling the significant issues facing women, girls and families, we know what disadvantage and vulnerability look like, and we know how to enable positive change.

Unlike mainstream consultancy services, our work is informed by practitioner-based insights and designed to support the overall mission and operations of Good Shepherd.

By working with us and investing in the services we provide, you access a legacy of knowledge and insight, and directly support Australia's most vulnerable.

For the past 10+ years, we have delivered impactful consulting and training programs for a broad range of organisations across government, business and corporate sectors, including:
